WINTER MEAT EATING.

The Poor Stomach's Tale of Woe. Just Now Mi-o-na Is Needed.

At this season of the year thousands of people are already showing the ill symptoms that are sure to result from the usual winter diet. Indoor life, meat-eating, hearty food, lack of exercise, overwork and poor ventilation spell "sickness," and poor health.

If the stomach cannot do its work properly, ill health is sure to follow. Mi-o-na is the one medicine that assures a natural digestion, that strengthens the stomach, that soothes and heals all irritation, congestion, and inflammation in the stomach or bowels. It is this that makes it a certain and guaranteed cure for all stomach troubles.

If the digestion is impaired, the blood is impoverished and becomes filled with poisonous impurities, deranging the whole system and causing sickness and suffering. Mi-o-na, acting upon the stomach and digestive organs cures sleeplessness, nervousness, nervous troubles, headaches, backaches, and general weakness and debility.

If you are weak and ailing the chances are that it is due to a diseased stomach, but you can be cured by using Mi-o-na. Ask Clark & Co., the reliable drug firm, to show you the strong guarantee under which Mi-o-na is sold. Mi-o-na costs but 50c a box. If it does not help you, the price is absolutely nothing.

AMUSEMENTS.

"CONGRESS OF NATIONS."

It is a noticeable fact that even at this late day there are some people who believe there is nothing under the sun, but there is, and Wm. H. and E. B. Josselyn's "Congress of Nations" is an entirely new feature and attraction. Nothing of the kind has ever been presented before and the machine which is used to present these actual photographs enlarged to 52 feet long and 35 feet high was invented, constructed and patented by Mr. Josselyn and is the only apparatus in the world that requires two operatives in order to present 815 scenes, including 109 from "Ben Hur," in 2 hours and 25 minutes, divided into 33 different subjects selected from every space and corner of the entire world. Everything is exactly as advertised and open to your inspection. At Paris Grand Friday and Saturday evenings, January 20-21, Saturday matinee.

MARGARET NEVILLE COMPANY.

Margaret Neville and her superb company will appear at the Paris Grand all next week in a repertoire of high-class royalty plays, with five big feature acts, including the great Cradoc in feats most amazing with Roman battle axes. He manipulates the ponderous weapons, glittering and as sharp as the proverbial razor, in all sorts of intricate movements with as much ease and fearlessness as though they were ten cent canes. The opening bill on Monday night will be "The Girl from the Slums." Matinee Wednesday and Saturday.

PLATT-ELIAS SUIT.

The Woman Tells of Her Elevation From a Low Position to One of Affluence.

SHE IS CHARGED WITH EXTORTION

Mrs. Elias Admitted She Had Served Terms in Prison for Larceny and Disorderly Conduct.

Mr. Platt Is Suing Her To Compel Her To Return $685,000 Which He Claims She Extorted From Him.

New York, Jan. 19.—Hannah Elias, the Negress whom aged John R. Platt is suing to compel her to return $685,000 which he claims she extorted from him during an acquaintance of 20 years, told the story of her life before Justice O'Gorman, in the supreme court. It was an extraordinary tale of sudden elevation from the lowest and most vicious surroundings to a position of affluence where money was literally rained on her and where she had everything that great wealth could provide. She declared that she had nothing to conceal and insisted that every dollar that Platt gave her had been given voluntarily. She believed, she said, that she was under no obligations to return any part of the money which she now possesses. How much money Platt gave her she could not say, even approximately, as she never kept any accounts of his gifts, which were made in large sums at frequent intervals during their entire acquaintance.

Mr. Platt Was Very Generous.

Mr. Platt was very generous, even from the first, she said, but he became more so after the death of his wife in 1893. He told her at that time that he wanted to provide for her handsomely and explained that if he mentioned her in his will a contest might result. He had decided, therefore, to give her a great deal of money while he was yet alive. He advised her to invest this money carefully and suggested that it might be well for her to place a considerable portion of it in savings banks. She said that the old man always had been very kind to her. Six months after his wife's death he gave the witness Mrs. Platt's watch and pocketbook. She identified these articles when they were produced by Mr. Black. Mrs. Elias apparently made no attempt to cover the details of her early life. She answered readily every question by her counsel as to her methods of life in Philadelphia and immediately after coming to this city, and admitted that she had served terms in prison, one in Philadelphia for larceny and the other in this city for disorderly conduct.

Distributed Her Wealth Freely.

It developed during the examination of witnesses that Mrs. Elias had distributed her easily acquired wealth with a free hand among those who had been of assistance to her. Lawyer Washington Brauns received from her more than $10,000 in fees. She paid more than $60,000 to one firm for carpets and furniture. A man, who acted as godfather at the christening of her child, received a present of $1,000, and when the child died it was placed in a mausoleum which she erected at a cost of $6,000. It appeared from the testimony also that John R. Platt had paid Lawyer Nantz $3,500 in connection with one of the Elias suits in which the lawyer was interested.

Poonville, Mo., Jan. 19.—Following the appointment of Dr. Leon Hill, a Negro physician of this city, as a member of the pension medical examination board of Cooper county, by the pension department at Washington, the two white members of the board, Dr. John T. McClanahan and Dr. Smiley, have tendered their resignations to the department, to take effect immediately unless the appointment of Hill is withdrawn. Dr. Hill was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Stiffler.

CHINA: "BETTER GETTEE WELLEE FLIRST."

JUDGE C. SWAYNE.

House of Representatives Adopted Dozen Articles of Impeachment Against Him.

WILL BE REPORTED TO THE SENATE

This Action Was the Culmination of a Debate Which Was in Progress For Over a Week.

The Charges of Impropriety Made in Connection With the Campaigns of 1896 and 1904 Were Revived in the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Senate.—The charges of impropriety made in connection with the campaigns of 1896 and 1904 were revived for a time in the senate by Mr. Stone, who spoke in support of his resolution providing for an investigation of the charges. He used with much freedom the names of President Roosevelt, Judge Parker and Chairman Cortelyou, and again related the allegations that Mr. Cortelyou had used the information secured by him as secretary of commerce and labor to secure money from the trusts. The discussion of the statehood bill continued, with Messrs. Clay, Nelson, Bailey and Stewart as speakers. The former senator and late vice presidential candidate, Hon. Henry Gassaway Davis, was a visitor on the floor of the senate and was cordially received by senators generally, especially by Senator Fairbanks.

House.—The house of representatives adopted the 12 articles of impeachment against Judge Charles Swayne, of the district court of the Northern district of Florida, which had been presented by its special committee of investigation. The speaker was authorized to appoint seven managers to present the case to the senate and conduct the impeachment proceedings before that body. This action was the culmination of a debate which has been in progress for over a week and which has developed partisan feeling and personal vituperation. The last time the house voted to present articles of impeachment was in 1876, when it voted the impeachment of W. W. Belknap, secretary of war under President Grant.

The First Vote.

The first vote, that to table the first three articles, those relating to the falsification of expenses, went against Judge Swayne by the narrow margin of five votes. This was regarded as the test vote, as the charge regarding expenses was the only one concurred in by the members of the committee; signing the minority report. The motion to table these articles was lost, 160 to 165. Twenty-four republicans voted with the democrats against tabling and three democrats voted with the republicans to table. In roll call these three articles were adopted:

Articles four and five, relating to the free use of a private car by Judge Swayne, were made the subject of a separate vote and adopted. Like action followed with regard to articles six and seven, charging him with non-residence in his district. This was the last roll call, as when articles eight, nine, ten and 11, relating to the Davis-Belden contempt cases, and article 12, relating to the O'Neal contempt cases, were declared adopted on viva voce vote.

Opposed to Joint Statehood.

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 19.—Both houses of the legislature passed strong resolutions protesting against the passage of a joint statehood bill and insisting that New Mexico is entitled to statehood within its present boundaries.

They Fear Capture.

Shanghai, Jan. 19.—The British steamer Powderham, which sailed from Barry, Eng., November 12 for Vladivostok, has entered the port of Woosung, her crew refusing to proceed to Vladivostok for fear of capture by the Japanese.

Cabinet's Resignation Accepted.

Mukden, Jan. 19.—President Loubet has accepted the resignations of the Combes ministry, but requested the ministers to continue the duties of their offices until a new cabinet had been formed.

FALL RIVER STRIKE SETTLED.

Both Sides Regard the Outcome of Deliberations As a Victory.

Boston, Jan. 19.—The strike of the cotton mill operatives at Fall River, which affected about 25,000 persons and has been in progress for six months, to the great hardship and suffering of Fall River's people, was settled through the mediation of Gov. William L. Douglas. Under the terms of an agreement as accepted by both manufacturers and operatives, at a conference held at the statehouse, the strikers will return to work at once under the 12½ per cent. reduction, against which they struck last July and with no discrimination because of the strike. No rate of wages was established, but it was agreed that Gov. Douglas shall investigate the matter of margins between the cost of cotton to the mill owners and the selling price of the cloth, and submit his conclusions as to an average margin upon which the manufacturers are to pay a dividend of five per cent. on wages earned from the present time to April 15. Both sides regard the outcome of the deliberations as a victory.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

A Report Showing the Number in the United States For Three Months.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The interstate commerce commission has issued a report on railroad accidents in the United States during the months of July, August and September, 1904, showing 228 passengers and 182 employees killed, and 2,154 passengers and 1,592 employees injured in train accidents. Other accidents to passengers and employees, not the result of collisions or other accidents, brings the aggregate casualties for the quarter up to 1,032 killed and 13,207 injured. There were 1,439 collisions and 1,321 derailments, the damage to cars, engines and roadways being $2,439,073. The report says that while these figures show a gratifying decrease in the number of employees killed, the three months as a whole may be termed the most disastrous one quarter on record in fatal accidents to passengers.

REPUBLICAN BOLLERS.

They Prevented the Election of Niedringhaus As Senator.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 19.—The bolt of six republicans on the first and two more on the second ballot from the ranks of Thomas K. Niedringhaus, the republican caucus nominee for United States senator, to succeed Francis M. Cockrell, whose election had seemed assured, resulted in no choice in the joint session of the legislature. With the exception of one, who cast his ballot for Dr. Pettijohn, of Linn county, all the bolters voted for Richard C. Kerens, of St. Louis, who was the strongest opponent of Niedringhaus in the caucus.

THE FIFTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senate.—By a vote of 30 to 24 the senate decided to consider the cross-town street railway bill for Washington, but the measure soon gave place to the statehood bill. That measure was discussed for three hours by Messrs. Simmons and Hepburn, both of whom favored the elimination of Arizona from the bill.

House.—Debate on the Swayne impeachment case in the house was exhaustive, dealing with many of the legal phases of the charges against Judge Swayne. The senate resolution fixing Wednesday, February 8, as the time for counting the electoral vote for president and vice president, the proceedings to take place in the hall of the houses, was adopted. A resolution was agreed to providing for the collection of additional cotton statistics by the census bureau.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Senate.—The unusual spectacle of a United States senator explaining on the floor of the senate charges made against himself in a court of law in his own state was witnessed in the senate, when Mr. Mitchell (Ore.) spoke of the indictment recently returned against him by an Oregon grand jury. The senator had not previously appeared in the senate since the indictment was returned and he was received by his fellow senators with many evidences of good will. He was much affected, his emotion at times being such that he read his statement with great difficulty. Mr. Hepburn concluded his speech on the statehood bill and Mr. Stone gave notice of a speech on his resolution for an investigation of the charges of corruption in the campaigns of 1896 and 1904.

House.—With an agreement reached to vote on the Swayne impeachment articles, the debate was carried on at high pressure for more than five hours. Mr. Grosvenor furnished the text for a very vigorous speech by Bourke Cockran by the reading of a letter from Judge Pardee, of New Orleans, declaring that politics was at the bottom of the impeachment proceedings. The fact of a judge transmitting such a letter, Mr. Cockran declared dramatically, was "a monstrous spectacle." Mr. Grosvenor asserted that there was no ground presented for impeachment in the report of the committee. The other defenders of the Florida judge during the day were Messrs. Lacey (Ia.), Nevins (O.), Moon (Pa.) and Crumpacker (Ind.). Mr. Lacey (Fla.) closed the debate for the day, reviewing the sentiment of his state and the record of Judge Swayne. He declared there was ample ground for impeachment.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Senate.—The charges of impropriety made in connection with the campaigns of 1896 and 1904 were revived for a time in the senate by Mr. Stone, who spoke in support of his resolution providing for an investigation of the charges. He used with much freedom the names of President Roosevelt, Judge Parker and Chairman Cortelyou, and again related the allegations that Mr. Cortelyou had used the information secured by him as secretary of commerce and labor to secure money from the trusts. The discussion of the statehood bill continued, with Messrs. Clay, Nelson, Bailey and Stewart as speakers. The former senator and late vice presidential candidate, Hon. Henry Gassaway Davis, was a visitor on the floor of the senate and was cordially received by senators generally, especially by Senator Fairbanks.

House.—The house of representatives adopted the 12 articles of impeachment against Judge Charles Swayne, of the district court of the Northern district of Florida, which had been presented by its special committee of investigation. The speaker was authorized to appoint seven managers to present the case to the senate and conduct the impeachment proceedings before that body. This action was the culmination of a debate which has been in progress for over a week and which has developed partisan feeling and personal vituperation. The last time the house voted to present articles of impeachment was in 1876, when it voted the impeachment of W. W. Belknap, secretary of war under President Grant.

The Japanese Are Now Prepared To House 35,000 of Them.

Lieut. Mirsky, a Russian prisoner of war at Matsuyama, will probably be imprisoned for life, owing to his repeated attempts to escape.

PROVES GREAT POWER

When Regular Medical Treatment Failed, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Her Rheumatism.

Hundreds of people afflicted with rheumatism have spent years under the care of excellent physicians in vain. Then they have settled down to the conviction that it is fastened on them for life. Mrs. Dinsmore was not willing to join the ranks of the hopeless merely because her doctor did not know how to help her. Here is her story:

"Four years ago I suffered greatly with rheumatism in my hands and knees. After I had been sitting a while my limbs seemed so heavy I could hardly walk on the first attempt. So long as I kept moving I was all right, but just as soon as I stopped, something seemed to settle in my knees and make them ache. My hands were so bad I couldn't touch the palms of them on a flat surface; they were swollen and pained so."

"Did you call in a physician?"

"I doctored steadily for over a year; then one doctor said: 'You have taken medicine strong enough to kill almost anything.' Still, it did not kill me nor the rheumatism."

"How, then, did you get rid of it?"

"At different times I had read in various publications about Dr. Williams' wonderful Pink Pills for Pale People, and I finally decided to try them. I took them steadily for four months in accordance with the directions. By that time I was completely cured."

"Have you been free from it ever since?"

"Since then I have had but one slight return of my trouble, and a box or two of the same pills made me all right again."

Mrs. F. A. Dinsmore lives in hearty enjoyment of her recovered health at Woburn, Mass., entirely freed from the grave anxieties that rheumatism always brings. When it appears in but a single joint it shows that the blood is in a faulty state in the whole body. It may at any moment break out elsewhere, and one of the dangers is that it may break out in the heart and then the result must be fatal. The only security is to keep the blood all the time in a perfectly sound condition.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make healthy blood. All other relief is superficial. This is thorough. These pills are sold by all druggists.

JEST AND JOLLITY.

Softly:—I say, doctah, do you—aw—think I have the brain fever?"

Doctor:—No, indeed; but you have the fever, all right.

"Did you ever attend a cooking school?" asked the Chicago girl.

"No," replied her Boston cousin, "but I graduated from a college of gastronomy."

"I manage to keep my boarders longer than you do," said the first landlady.

"Oh, I don't know," rejoined the other. "You keep them so thin that they look longer than they really are."

"You are sweet enough to eat," said the very young man who imagined he had the love market cornered.

"Thanks," rejoined the matter-of-fact maid. "There's a small restaurant just around the corner."

"I'm afraid you're not very wise," said the fair girl.

"Why?" demanded the persistent suitor.

"Because 'a word to the wise is sufficient' and I have said 'No' to you."

"Yes, but I'm wise enough to know that a woman's 'No' may eventually mean 'yes.'"

"Can't yer do a little somethin' fer an old soldier?" whined Tired Tiffins.

"Well, I don't know," replied the portly citizen. "If you can show your discharge papers, I may do something for you."

"I hain't been discharged yet, boss," replied the hobo. "It's a soldier of fortune I am."

"Can't yer do a little somethin' fer an old soldier?" whined Tired Tiffins.

"Well, I don't know," replied the portly citizen. "If you can show your discharge papers, I may do something for you."

WASHINGTON LETTER

BUDGET OF GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

ALLISON IN THE SENATE.

He Holds the Record for Continuous Service—Congress Listens to Authorities — An Interesting White House Character.

WASHINGTON. — Senator William Boyd Allison, of Iowa, now holds the record for the longest continuous service in the United States senate. For half a century that honor belonged to the late Thomas Benton, of Missouri, but his length of service was eclipsed by the late Justin S. Morrill, of Vermont, and now Senator Allison is the record breaker. Senator Benton had a continuous service in the senate of 30 years. On the day of his death Senator Morrill had held a seat continuously in the senate for 31 years, 9 months and 24 days. Senator Allison, on the first of January, had rounded out 31 years, 9 months and 26 days. On the 4th of next March he will have been in the senate continuously 32 years, having taken his seat for the first time on March 4, 1873.

There have been senators who could trace back their entry into the senate for many more years than any of these distinguished statesmen who held their seats continuously for so long. For instance, there was the late John Sherman, of Ohio, who took his seat as the successor of Salmon P. Chase, who had been made secretary of the treasury in President Lincoln's cabinet on March 23, 1861. He resigned from the senate on March 5, 1897, or 36 years after he had first taken the oath. In the meantime, however, he had left the senate for four years to become secretary of the treasury under President Hayes. His total service was 31 years, 11 months and 14 days.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who will retire on the 4th of March, first took his seat February 1, 1865, just 40 years ago the 1st of next month. His service, however, was broken by an interval of 12 years from 1875 to 1887. Senator Allison had eight years to his credit in the house before he went to the senate, so that on March 4 he will have rounded out 40 years of continuous service in congress.

Authorities Receive Attention.

HE most retiring and modest man in congress can get a hearing if he speaks on a subject with which he is thoroughly acquainted. There are a number of business men in the senate, for instance, who are seldom heard in debate, and who seldom make speeches on the general legislation. It happens frequently, however, that subjects are introduced with which they are thoroughly familiar, and it is then that they command attention and are listened to with interest by their colleagues. The late Senator Hanna established his reputation as a ready debater and a forcible speaker when he addressed the senate on the subject of an isthmian canal. The construction of canals which involves the use of excavating machinery was something with which Mr. Hanna was altogether familiar, and the convincing way in which he talked of this business proposition made his speeches the most effective of any delivered on the floor of the senate.

The majority of the senators are lawyers, many of them theorists, and not a few purely sophomoric orators. It was a delight to them to listen to some one who could talk practical common sense and enlighten them on business methods which he could explain in a way to be understood.

Senator Kearns, of Utah, has seldom opened his mouth in the senate, but the other day, when the subject of the mining laws and practical mining came up, Mr. Kearns took the floor and was at once at his ease in discussing a subject which he knows from the bottom up. He had learned mining from the pick and shovel up to the latest mechanical method, and there was no point in the whole subject with which he was not familiar. The senate listened to him with great attention, but when he talked of ledges, outcrops, surface indication, dips, levels, slag, strikes, extra lateral rights, veins, bounding planes, segment, quartzite, apex law, drifts, bords, vertical surface, overlying formations, etc., his colleagues were ready to accept his statements on faith.

A White House Character.

NE of the characters at the white house sits outside the door of Secretary Loeb and acts as messenger. He is growing a little slow, as 67 years have passed over his woolly head. He is an African of the darkest type, with a round, fat, shining, good-natured face, and his name, Arthur Simmons, is known probably to as many statesmen as those of more conspicuous public characters. Simmons ran away from his home in North Carolina in 1864. He made his way to Washington and, like all negroes, looked on Abraham Lincoln as the patron saint of his race, and the one to whom he could appeal for help. He reached President Lincoln and related his tale of fleeing from slavery and coming to Washington by the underground route. Mr. Lincoln gave him a minor place in his household and, except for a year or two during Cleveland's first administration.

In all these years of rubbing against statesmen and public officials Arthur has received some polish, but he still retains one noted trait of his race—a love for the succulent 'possum. Every holiday season some of his old friends in the south send him the finest, fattest 'possums they can discover.

"Just you wait till next Sunday, and if you want to see the best dinner in Washington, come around to my little home," he will say. "I have the finest, fattest, persimmon-fed 'possum you ever saw. I will put him out doors in the frost until Sunday morning, and then I'll have him cooked with yams around him and with brown gravy. Then there will be apple sauce and persimmon sauce, and just a taste of something to wash it all down."

Canal Legislation.

HERE promises to be a merry time over isthmian canal legislation. Some of the big statesmen at the capitol have gotten the idea that the canal commission created by last year's legislation is an unwieldy body and has not "made good." They are proposing to abolish the commission as it now stands and authorize another of not more than three members, and these gentlemen to receive salaries of not exceeding $7,500 a year each. The salaries of the present commission are $12,000 a year. Naturally there will be some opposition to reducing this commission, and especially to a reduction in its compensation. The commission, of which Rear Admiral Walker is chairman, is prepared to show that each member has performed valuable service, and that its future work demands at least seven members, each one of whom can have a particular branch of the work in charge.

The house committee, of which Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, is chairman, and which visited the isthmus just before the meeting of congress, seems particularly set against a continuance of the present commission. Members assert that the commission has done very little work and that all of a practical nature that has been accomplished has been due to Chief Engineer Wallace, who is supposed to be subordinate to the commission. These congressmen claim that the work should be put in the hands of Engineer Wallace absolutely, and that he be given authority to select an advisory board of engineers with whom he can consult on the problems presented in the construction of the canal. They are willing to compromise by authorizing a commission of three men, who may have charge of the executive features of the enterprise, but who will not be allowed to interfere with the construction and with the engineering details.

There is a strong feeling that the whole work should be placed under the control of the army engineers in the war department. Engineer Wallace's report is now being awaited with great interest, as it is believed that he will show that a sea-level canal can and ought to be constructed.

Cannon's Economy.

PEAKER CANNON's policy of economy in congress is taking fast hold of the leaders in both bodies. He has won over to his side Mr. Allison, chairman of the appropriations committee of the senate, and with Mr. Hemmenway, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, already in line, there promises to be a pretty strict enforcement of the economy policy. A gentleman entered the senate committee on appropriations the other day with a lighted cigar in his mouth, and happened to see Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, sitting there. Removing his cigar, he asked, apologetically: "Beg pardon, do you allow smoking in this room?"

"Oh," responded Mr. Spooner, "anything is allowed in this room except appropriations."

"Uncle Joe," as the speaker is familiarly known, is very much agitated over the $30,000,000 gap between Uncle Sam's vest and breeches. He has warned "the boys," as he terms the members of the house, that they must go slow on expenditures and help him to close that gap as far as possible. He has succeeded in cutting down the military appropriation bill $7,000,000, and is now at work on the naval committee trying to persuade that body that the department's estimate of $116,000,000 is entirely too high. He advocates retrenchment in the construction of vessels, and declares that it would be perfectly safe to delay building any more battleships until it is discovered whether they are the very best type of naval architecture. In this move he has the backing of Mr. Hale, chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs, so that the prospect of three battleships, five or six cruisers, and as many scout ships, which have been recommended, being built is not very good.

SCHAFFER MURDER.

Frank Evans and William Browning Arrested on a Warrant Sworn Out by an Attorney.

ARE CHARGED WITH THE CRIME.

The Arrests Were Due to a Story Told by the Divorced Wife of Browning.

The Woman Says He Confessed That He and Evans Did the Deed—Both Men Deny All Knowledge of the Killing.

Bedford, Ind., Jan. 19.—Frank Evans and William Elmer Browning were arrested on warrants sworn out by John H. Underwood, an attorney, charging them with the murder of Miss Sarah C. Schaffer on the night of January 21, 1903. The men were taken to Underwood's office, where they were questioned for an hour without result.

The arrest is due to a story told by Mrs. Cook, the divorced wife of Browning. According to her story her husband, from whom she was at the time separated, told her that he and Evans had killed Miss Schaffer. In the confession she says he made to her he said that he and Evans had planned to assault Miss Schaffer on the night previous to the murder, but one of them failed to appear and the assault was postponed until the following night, when the two met at the alley and as Miss Schaffer passed Browning struck her on the head with a slung-shot, stunning her.

The Blow That Killed Her.

Evans caught her and carried her into the cabshed where, with a flat rock a little larger than a man's hand he struck her a blow on the forehead which resulted in her death.

According to the story told by Mrs. Cook, Evans and Browning walked west through the alley to M street. On the way Evans produced a bottle of whisky and after giving Browning a drink took one himself and threw the bottle down where it was found next morning.

Evans changed his clothing, giving the bloodstained garments to Browning with instructions to burn them. Browning gave them to his wife, who hid them, where, it is claimed, they were found a few days ago. Among the clothing is a cuff with a button to match one said to have been found in the cabshed a day or two after the murder.

Six or eight weeks ago Mrs. Cook was reported to have told a similar story, but when she and Browning were taken before the mayor they both denied having made the statements referred to. Evans says that he was guilty of no crime and had no fear of violence. Both men are now in jail. The arrest caused scarcely a ripple of excitement.

Claims It Is Spite Work.

"I never saw Browning until to-day," said Frank Evans at the jail.

"I had absolutely nothing to do with the Schaffer murder and this whole thing is a conspiracy of two people whose names I could give. I have no worry except that I should be home with my wife and children."

Browning and Evans occupy adjoining cells in the new jail. Browning seems to hardly realize the seriousness of the charge against him. He says he thinks his former wife told the story of his alleged confession for spite.

MRS. CHADWICK ILL.

Said To Be Suffering From Physical and Mental Collapse.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 19.—Two physicians were called to see Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick in jail. She is said to be suffering from physical and mental collapse. Attorney Dawley says she is afflicted with heart trouble and would not be able to stand a trial in court in her present condition. Mrs. Chadwick is said to have frequent fainting spells. The announcement that Mr. Carnegie had decided to reimburse the losers by the failure of the Oberlin bank has seemed to greatly affect Mrs. Chadwick.

Dr. Chadwick called at the jail and spent half an hour in conversation with his wife. He admitted to the jail officials that he thought his wife was a very sick woman. He asked to be notified immediately if there should be any dangerous symptoms in her illness. Dr. Chadwick had not called on his wife in 12 days.

Looks Like A Long Session.

The prospects for a short session of the Legislature were considerably clouded by the developments of Wednesday at the Capitol. It became apparent that there was to be a policy of obstruction in certain quarters, and the opinion was freely expressed that a forty day session might be expected, with a possibility that it would extend to the legal limit of sixty days. Some of the members propose that the old question of removal of the Capitol to another city shall be fought over.

January Sale of "Orphan Lots."

A sale for housewives—a sale of "orphan lots"—the ones and twos and threes of a kind that got stranded here about December 25th. That's our good news for January. We commence this sale to-day, and it lasts just ten days. We have cut the prices deeply because we want the goods to go quickly. The Fair is never lukewarm or half-hearted when it starts on a clean-out clearance. These prices, a random few out of hundreds equally attractive, ought to bring you here post haste. There are hosts of different articles in this sale—all of those things that housewives really need. Come and see.

She Will Sleep To-Night.

The following beautiful lines were written by Rev. Joseph A. Malone, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, and dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Kenney upon the death of their daughter, Mrs. Mayme Kenney Ferguson:

Smooth out the braids of her silken hair
On her queenly brow with tender care;
Gather the robe in a final fold
Around the form that will not grow old;
Lay on her bosom, pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest, flowers that blow;
Kiss her and leave her, your heart's delight,
In dreamless peace she will sleep to-night.

A shadowy gleam of life-light lies
Around the lids of her slumberous eyes,
And her lips are closed as in fond delay
Of the loving words she had to say;
But hear gentle heart forget to beat,
And from dainty head to dainty feet
She is strangely quiet, cold and white,
The fever is gone; she will sleep, to-night.

Put by her work and her empty chair;
Fold up the garments she used to wear;
Let down the curtains and close the door,
She will need the garish light no more,
For the task assigned her under the sun
Is finished now, and the guerdon won;
Tenderly kiss her, put out the light,
And leave her alone—she will sleep to-night.

O Blessed sleep, that will not break
For tears, nor prayers, nor love's sweet sake;
O perfect rest, that knows no pain,
No throb, no thrill of heart or brain;
O life sublime beyond all speech,
That only the pure through dying reach;
God understands and His ways are right;
Bid His beloved a long good-night.

Weep for the days that will come no more,
For the sunbeam's flown from heath and door,
For a missing step, for the nameless grace
Of a tender voice and a loving face;
But not for the soul whose goal is won,
Whose infinite joy is just begun,
Not for the spirit enrolled in light,
And crowned where the blessed are to-night.

Aged Newspaper Man Retires.

Col. Geo. S. Rosser, the senior proprietor of the Maysville Bulletin, retires, owing to ill health. Mr. Rosser was one of the founders of the Maysville Bulletin, 44 years ago, his partner at that time being Maj. Ross, and since Maj. Ross' death has had associated with him Mr. Michael McCarthy. The Bulletin has been a success from the start under Mr. Rosser's management. The writer can speak from experience, having worked for Mr. Rosser for a number of years, that the newspaper fraternity loses from active service, one of the noblest and best men that any man ever worked for or had personal dealings with. We sincerely hope that he will regain his health, and may see his old and faithful men, Mr. Altmeyer, who has purchased his interest in the paper, and Mr. McCarthy, who have spent all their working lives with him succeeded.

The Bulletin, under the management of McCarthy & Altmeyer, may be depended upon to keep pace with the times. The News wishes the new firm success, and Mr. Rosser's speedy recovery.

The Bulletin states in its announcement of the sale, that the long service and close friendship that existed between Mr. Rosser and Mr. Altmeyer went as part compensation for the paper.

Mr. Altmeyer is a brother, of Mr. Geo. Altmeyer, who conducted a cigar factory in Paris recently.

Fail to Elect Caucus Nominees.

Thomas K. Niedringhaus, the Republican caucus nominee for United States Senator, failed of election in the Missouri Legislature Wednesday owing to a bolt of eight of the Republican legislators. Seven of the bolting Republicans voted for R. C. Kerens who was defeated by Mr. Niedringhaus for the Republican caucus nomination. The anti-Niedringhaus forces claim that the bolting element will be strengthened and assert that at least fifteen votes will be cast against Niedringhaus by Republican members. It is believed by well-posted politicians at Jefferson City that the defeat of Niedringhaus is assured.

Burglars on Mt. Airy.

Burglars visited Mt. Airy Avenue last evening, between 5 and 6 o'clock, and entered the house of Mr. Alex Rice by prying open a window. They secured $5 in cash. They visited Mr. Julian Howe and got a pistol and dress skirt, and enjoyed a good lunch of preserves and bread. While here they called up "Central" over the phone. "Central" answered "What number?" and the burglar replied "To h—l." The young lady at "Central" said she could not tell whether he was black or white, he hung up the receiver so suddenly.

Burglars entered the residence of Mr. Oscar Miller, in Angels division, on Tuesday night but were frightened away before they got any booty.

T. Porter Smith Behind In His Accounts With Insurance Companies.

T. Porter Smith, the popular and hustling insurance man, has left the town for parts unknown, is the report now circulating on our streets. Mr. Smith in company with his wife left Paris on early Sunday morning train, saying he was going as far as Falmouth with her, she being en route to California. He has not been heard from since, and developments show that probably his departure is for good. It is said that checks he had given to different insurance companies represented by him, amounting to $2,700 for premiums, had been protested at local banks in the past few days. We are also reliably informed that several of the banks hold his paper for over $1,000, however, with the very best men in our county as endorsers, which makes the bank safe.

Mr. Smith is a genial and sociable young man and had many friends here who regret exceedingly that he felt compelled to leave the way he did, and it is hoped that he may yet be able to straighten his financial matters to a satisfactory settlement and return.

The report of his leaving has caused quite a stir among the general agents for the companies he represented, as they are coming in on every train. The policy holders in Mr. Smith's companies are also examining their policies and quite a number having them transferred to other companies.

Ugly rumors are afloat—one that he had insured some in companies that were not doing business in the State; one that he had received premiums and told the purchasers that he would keep their policies for them and upon investigation it was found that the insurance had never been written. He had been in bad repute with the Board of Underwriters for some time. Members of the Board claiming that although he signed the agreement with them not to cut rates, yet never stopped cutting, taking in many cases only the premium that had to be paid to the company, and in some cases less.

If this is true, it can readily be seen that either the company or himself would eventually have to quit business. The way things looked yesterday it would seem that both got the hot end of it, as Smith is gone and is indebted to 'one company in the sum of about $3,000.

Mr. Smith was a high roller. He did not gamble, but was fond of out-of-door sports and spent considerable money on them.

We do not believe Porter would intentionally commit a crime and think that his free and easy way of living and doing business is the cause of his trouble.

All parties holding policies in companies represented by T. Porter Smith will please call at his office on Broadway, with their policies. Representatives of each company will be present.

Earlywine Our Next Postmaster.

The President, Wednesday, sent to the Senate the nomination of J. L. Earlywine to be postmaster at this place. Mr. Earlywine has been Assistant Postmaster under J. S. Sweeney and has filled that position efficiently. He is a beneficiary of the Garth Fund and a worthy and deserving young man. He was backed in his fight for the place by ex-Governor Bradley, to whom he acted as private secretary when Bradley was Governor. The ex-Governor made a personal appeal to the President in his behalf and landed the juicy plum for him. His appointment, with the announcement that Charlie Wilmoth will be his deputy, seems to give general satisfaction. Both of these young men are thoroughly competent, and we can expect better service at the postoffice when they take charge of affairs on March 1st.

Broke Up His Happy Home.

Several weeks ago Charles Parker, a colored masher, of Carlisle, invaded the home of Junius Ayers, colored, who resides on Sycamore street, resulting in Junius being driven out in the cold by his hard-hearted better-half. He remained away until yesterday, when his wife sent for him to return. He hastened back to forgive and forget, but upon his arrival there, Chas. Parker was still holding the fort and opened fire on him. One ball struck Ayers in the breast, inflicting a painful but not necessary dangerous wound. The Carlisle negro masher was not satisfied with breaking up Ayers' happy home but seemed determined to kill him. The woman in the case is the mother of only seven small children.

CROSSES AND KISSES.

The letters I get from my little girl
Are sure to end like this:
X X X X X
X X X X X
X X X X X
A score of crosses, row on row,
And every cross is a kiss.
And through the miles that separate
My own little one from me,
I feel the tug of her loving arms
And her loving face I see.
Every cross is a kiss, she says.
My crosses are never few;
They wait for me when I wake at dawn,
They follow the long day through.
I never dreamed they were sent in love.
Ah, me! What good I miss
When I push away with angry hands
The cross that is meant for a kiss.
We mortals walk in a world of love,
But we make it a world of care.
Some crosses are sharp and bring the blood,
And some are heavy to bear.
But I think when we go in the arms of Death
To the heights of perfect bliss,
We shall see by a backward glance on earth
That every cross was a kiss.

CHAPTER XXVI.—CONTINUED.

It was the one touch of human kindness he had exhibited in the whole interview.
"Why did you hesitate, Philip?"
whispered the girl reproachfully, as she looked fondly at him. "You refused me. You almost broke my heart.
To lose you now would kill me."
"Only because I seemed to be putting a stigma upon you by consenting," he said softly in reply. "Your grandfather thinks that your honor—forgive
my saying it—demands our marriage."
"What matter his thoughts? We know."

"Yes, and I was a fool. You will be my wife, my own, in one moment.
You can go away with me with a clear conscience then. And when you are mine let me see the man who will dare question aught!"
"O Philip, I am so happy! 'Tis like life from death. I thought you lost,
and now—"

The archbishop at that moment appeared in the doorway attended by Jean-Renaud.

"You sent for me, my dear marquis?" he said blandly, but in great surprise.

"I did, monseigneur."
"And for what purpose, pray?"
"I want you to solemnize a marriage,
that of my granddaughter and this—
this gentleman."

"What, monseigneur?"
"And now, too!"

"But, Monsieur le Marquis, did you
not say she was betrothed to the Count
de Kersaint?"

"Monseigneur," answered the marquis haughtily, "here is a strange mis-chance. I can not tell the tale, but the honor of my house requires a marriage, now and instantly, between this young man and the Countess Anne de Rohan. I jest not, monseigneur.
Mortals! do I look like a man who trifles? You have known me of old,
most reverend sir, I mean what I say.
The marriage must take place!"

"But Monsieur de Kersaint?"
"God help him when he knows the truth!" said the marquis. "Will you proceed, monseigneur?"

"The young man is of our faith?"
"No, monseigneur," answered Graf-
ton. "I am a Protestant."

"But you can dispense with that yourself, monseigneur," interrupted the marquis promptly. "I tell you nothing shall prevent this."

"If the young man consents to—
Will you bring up the children of this union, should any be born to you, in the faith of the Holy Roman Catholic church, monseigneur?" asked the prelate.

"I will, so help me God," answered
Philip promptly.

"There will be no children," interrupted the marquis grimly. "Will you now proceed?"

"But we lack an altar, vestments,
lights, attendants, witnesses, marquis!"
"No altar is needed here, and as for witnesses, I am one, Josette is another,
and if you want a third, here is Jean-Renaud—people upon whom I can rely."

"Mademoiselle," said the perplexed
archbishop, turning to Anne, "do you wish to marry this man?"

"Yes, monseigneur."
"Do you love him?"
"With all my heart."
"And you, monseigneur?" he continued,
looking at Grafton.

"My love and desire, most reverend sir, more than match her own, yet I must say, I protest that this hasty marriage implies no doubt upon the honor of the lady who takes my name."

"Hell and furies!" cried the marquis
inconsistently, "who dares to imply such a thing! Monseigneur, will you proceed, or shall I kill this man before your eyes?"

"The brief words which mean so much
and blud so fast were soon spoken.
Philip and Anne made the responses,
and kneeling before the aged cleric received his benediction. As soon as he had finished, the archbishop, realizing that there was a delicate situation,

discreetly withdrew and left the participants in this strange wedding alone
once more. As they rose to their feet
the Englishman turned to the woman,
all his thoughts swept away in the knowledge that at last she was his wife.

"My own, my own!" he cried, taking her in his arms. But before he could press one kiss upon her forehead the marquis intervened.

"No, sir," he cried, "you have dishonored the house of Rohan. You have made what amends you could
by marrying the girl. That is all.
You shall never see your wife again.
I shall kill you where you stand. The connection shall end that way. Draw, sir!" cried the old man, shaking his blade in the other's face. "Defend yourself, if you can."

"I will not cross swords with a man
old enough to be my grandfather," answered Grafton—"one who stands in such a relationship as you to the lady
I am happy to call my wife. By your consent, by your urging, we were married. She is mine before Heaven itself.
No man may part her from me. She goes with me."

"How will you take her hence,
pray?"

"By this window, through which I came," cried Grafton, lifting up his wife in his arms and springing backward.

"A moi!" called the marquis loudly.
The servants came running into the room in response to this call.

"Ha!" cried the marquis. "The Baron
de Croisic's way! 'Tis his tower. You shall end like the lover of the fair Jehane. Jean-Renaud, seize this man."

Jean-Renaud stepped forward slowly.
His affections were with his young mistress, and he secretly admired the gallant Englishman who had won her,
yet his duty bade him obey the marquis.

"Back!" cried Grafton, whipping
out his pistol and pointing it at Jean-Renaud. "A step nearer and you are a dead man."

The man stopped short; he knew decision when he met it.

"'Tis true you have the advantage,
Monsieur le Marquis. I can not take Madame Grafton away from you tonight, alone as I am, but be certain that I will come back for her with force that cannot be denied. I shall have her if I have to tear down the castle stone
by stone. Take good care of madame."

"HE IS DEAD, SIR."

sir," Grafton continued insolently, "I leave her in your charge. Back, you cattle!" he cried, swinging his pistol toward the servants and lackeys, who were huddled together in the rear of Jean-Renaud. "Anne, wife, farewell!"

"Monseigneur," said the marquis, striving to regain his wonted calmness,
"you may storm the castle if you will.
You will not find madame here. When the French fleet sails in the morning
we go with her. Now, men, upon him!"

Grafton discharged his pistol at the nearest valet, and as the man fell he hurled the empty weapon into the midst of the rest. With one look at Anne he turned and sprang through the oriel window. He grasped the rope and slid down it rapidly.

The men surged toward the balcony.
Anne sprang between them. She caught the marquis by the arm and Josette seized Jean-Renaud, but the rest swarmed past them and filled the balcony. One of the men lifted a dagger to cut the rope. A deafening roar rang out in the night; the man screamed with pain and his arm dropped to his side. Another shot was heard. The crowd shrank back for a few seconds and Grafton reached the foot of the tower. He scrambled down the rocks to find old Jabez, smoking
musket in his hand, waiting for him
in the prow of the boat.

"Who fired?" he cried.

"'Twas me, yer Honor; I was awatchin' the winder. I seen yer Honor come out, then I seen the man raise the knife, an' I blazed away at him.
I hain't forgot how to shoot nuther."

"You saved me," cried Grafton.
"Shove off the boat. Lively! Break out the oars; we must get away."

Slocum sprang to the oars and Grafton seized the tiller. The balcony above was filled with men now. The old marquis was there, and Anne—his wife. He could spare only a second for a glance. The light from blazing torches threw a dim illumination down upon the little bay. A woman screamed. Shots rang out, bullets splattered the water all about them.

"Are you hit, Jabez?"

"No, sir; be you?"

"I'm all right, too; pull, man, pull,
for God's sake!"

Presently they were in the entrance and out of danger. The wind was blowing offshore. The night was mild and pleasant now. The moon was shining. They easily threaded their way among the rocks. The mast was stepped, the sail set, and the little boat raced out to sea. They were away, they were free.

"Beg pardon, sir, did you git wot
'au went fer?" asked Jabez, after a while.

"Yes," answered Grafton. "The French ships are to sail for Quiberon
Bay at six in the morning."
"Aan' the ledly, sir?"

"I married her."
"Good Lord!" exclaimed the old man
under his breath. "Quick work, that!
An' you left your wife?"

"With her grandfather, Slocum. She sails on Le Thesee with the fleet in the morning. Not a word of this to the men, as you value my approval. You have done well and I shall not forget
it."

"Thank Heaven, you have come!"
exclaimed Hatfield, as the dinghy swept alongside the gangway of the Maldstone and Grafton clambered on board. "I had almost given you up."

"What time is it?" asked the captain.
Before Hatfield could answer eight bells rang out forward on the forecastle.

"In the very nick of time!" exclaimed Grafton.

"Look yonder, sir," said the lieutenant, pointing away.

The ships in the harbor were ablaze with lights. They were getting under way.

"Ay," said Grafton, "they are leaving this morning, now. The wind has changed. They are going to Quiberon.
Square away immediately, and crack everything on. We must get the news
to Sir Edward before night."

"And the lady?" queried Hatfield.
"Did you see her?"

"Yes," answered Grafton, smiling.
"I not only saw her, but I married her.
Come into the cabin after you are on the course and I will tell you all about
it."

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE ADMIRAL GETS THE NEWS.

IT was early in the morning of the fourteenth day of November, 1759. The Maldstone was gently swinging into Torbay.

The wind, which had been blowing hard from the southwest during the night, had moderated until it was now
a gentle breeze, so that every cloth
of canvas, including her studdingsails, was spread on the frigate to catch and hold the light air. Grafton and Hatfield stood on the weather
side of the quarter-deck eagerly surveying the roadstead.

The harbor was crowded with great
ships of the line, huge monsters,
swinging to their anchors, prows
pointed out to sea under the incoming tide, now at full flood. The one nearest to the Maldstone, and consequently the farthest from the shore, was a magnificent vessel of three decks, carrying 100 guns. From her main-masthead a small blue flag could be seen fluttering, which denoted the rank of the commander of the fleet, a full admiral.

The different ships of this great armada with nice seamanship had been anchored in their appointed places, and all were in beautiful order. Their sails were furled with the tact smoothness of a glove on a lady's hand, and their ponderous yards
squared with geometrical accuracy.
Their complicated tracery of rigging
and running gear, tautened with mathematical nicety and soaring aloft from the mass of black and heavy shrouds
and swiftness, springing from top,
cross-tree and yard-arm, in ever-refining and more delicate lines, rose higher and higher until it was focused upon the truck-ends of the slender skysail poles, which terminated
the ponderous and towering spars.

Though weather-beaten and storm-
worn, they seemed fit for any emergency. Like the veterans of an army, they were ready for any demand which could be made upon them, and they looked it. There was a sense of use, of habit, of action, of power, conveyed
in their stately repose on the unruffled surface of the water that morning, which filled the young men, who were contemplating them, with pride and delight.

Forward on the Maldstone the fore-
royal-halliards had been settled away
as she drew up the roads, and her number had been made at the fore-royal-masthead. When it had been acknowledged on the flagship, the latter had signalled for the frigate to anchor under her lee. On account of the position of the admiral's ship, the Royal George, well in advance of the rest of the squadron, there was ample room for Grafton to come boldly in head-on, with all standing, sweep to port, and make his anchorage without interfering with any other ship in the fleet.

The Maldstone made a superb picture from the flagship. There was just wind enough to fill every sail rapidly, and she slipped easily through the water, rocking and pitching as gently, as noiselessly, as a summer
cloud driven across the sky by scarce-felt breezes. It was time.

"Right the helm! Stand by the starboard anchor! Man the sparker brails! Let go the starboard anchor!
Brail in!"

With a mighty plunge the great anchor dropped into the still waters of the bay. The hempen cable rushed through the hawse-pipes, the ship
surged slowly ahead a moment, and then, her way checked by the pull of the cable and the flooding tide as well,
she stopped, settled back, and slowly dropped astern, where she swung to the full scope of the cable. She had come to rest exactly where she should be. It could not have been more deft-ly done if she had been picked up and set down in the designated spot.

"All hands furl sail! Lay aloft, top-men!" called out Grafton, a note of triumph in his voice.

In an instant the shrouds of his frigate were black with men swarming
aloft, the light yard men, of course, in the lead. With nimble feet they ran up the shaking rigging, laid out on the broad yard-arms, and began to roll up the drooping canvas.

Old Hawke lifted and waved his hand toward the frigate, and, as if it had been a signal, 1,000 throats on his own ship sent forth a ringing cheer
of acknowledgment and greeting.

The men had been watching the movements of the Maldstone with intense interest and appreciation. They knew good seamanship when they saw it. Hawke was a thorough sailor and would tolerate no one who was not, in any ship or fleet he commanded. Grafton's heart swelled with pride and pleasure as he lifted his hat and waved it toward his generous superior in grateful acknowledgment. And, indeed, never had a delicate maneuver
been more gracefully and smartly performed.

As soon as the men, who had finished their duties most expeditiously,
had laid down from aloft, and had begun to square yards and clear up the gear, Grafton directed his gig to be called away, and temporarily relinquishing the charge of the ship to Hatfield, he repaired on board the flagship. He was met at the gangway of the latter vessel by Capt. John Campbell, her commander, and was at once
escorted to the quarter-deck, whither Hawke, attended by his staff, had descended to meet him.

"Ah, Grafton," he said in a deep voice, which well accorded with his stout person, "I am glad to see you again; and let me tell you I never saw a ship brought to in better shape than that one. 'Twas a smart piece of seamanship and handsomely done. I hope our young gentlemen marked it, Campbell. Now, sir, we are brimful
of curiosity to know your errand. Eh, captain? My young friends here have been fairly thirsting to hear your tidings. What news?"

"Dispatches, Sir Edward, from Vice Admiral Saunders. Here they are,
sir."

"And how is my old friend?" exclaimed the admiral, taking the packet.
"Well, sir."

"And that bold fire-eater, young Gen. Wolfe? He was on my ship in the Rochefort expedition, and I—"

"He is dead, sir," interrupted Grafton sadly.

"Dead! Is it possible? When?
How?"

"The day we beat Montcalm, Sir Edward."

"Ah, he was a gallant soul! Dead!
Poor fellow!"

"Yes, sir. Shot in the final charge that decided the day in our favor, and died on the field almost instantly."

"And Quebec?"

"Is England's."

"Magnificent!" cried Hawke. "How
was it?"

In rapid words Grafton rehearsed
the story of their great exploits in the new world, the officers crowding as near to the admiral and Grafton as they dared, to listen to the stirring tale.

"Mr. Vernon," said Hawke to his signal officer, when Grafton had finished his story, "signal to the fleet that Quebec has fallen. 'Twill be news they will appreciate. And add that Gen. Wolfe has been killed. Now I shall go below and look over these dispatches. You will find many old friends upon the ship, Grafton. I doubt not," he added, turning away.

"Beg pardon, Sir Edward, but that's not all," said Grafton hurriedly.

The old man stopped short and looked at him in some surprise.

"What, sir! Have you more news
than is contained in the dispatches?"

"Yes, sir."

"What is it, pray?"

"I ran over to Brést, sir, thinking to find you."

"Ha!" exclaimed the admiral, coming back toward him, deeply interested in this new subject. "What tidings
from there?"

"Well, sir, when we saw you were not there we ran in close, knowing the French couldn't get out on account of the strong westerly gale, to find out what we could about their intentions, and—I went ashore—and—
happened to be present, unobserved,
of course, at a banquet at which Monsieur de Conflans and his officers were the guests."

"Yes," said the admiral, his eyes
sparkling with excitement, "did you hear anything? Did they say what they intended to do?"

"They are going out, sir."

"Good! Did you find out when?"

"Yes, sir. I heard de Conflans say, yesterday morning," answered Grafton, "the wind having shifted; but it changed again, and came from the west once more, so they have scarcely got to sea yet."

"'Tis news indeed, Grafton, and of the best!" exclaimed Sir Edward, delighted at the prospect.

"I think they will go out at the first practicable moment," answered Grafton.

"I hope so. Did you learn their destination?"

"Quiberon bay, sir, where the transports are, and d'Aligault's army. After that, Ireland or Scotland or anywhere they can strike."

"Glorious news, Capt. Grafton!
Once let us get at them on the high sea and they will strike no place but Davy Jones' locker, I'll warrant. Hey, gentlemen? We were forced to raise the blockade temporarily by the tremendous westerly gale and ran here
for safety. We got under way yesterday morning, but were forced back again. We'll try it again this morning—immediately. We'll make a fair wind of a foul. Let me see, the tide will turn in an hour and we can get off then. Mr. Vernon, recall all boats and signal the captains to come on board
the flagship at six bells. Capt. Campbell, prepare to trip at once. Let me know when you are up and down.
We'll have the ships weigh in succession immediately. Meanwhile do you come into my cabin, Grafton; I wish to talk over the matter further with you."

BITS BY THE BABES.

Elmer—Papa, is it always damp
where they raise mushrooms?
Papa—Yes, my son.

"Is that why they look like umbrellas?"

Harry—When I grow up I'm going to be a soldier.

Mamma—But soldiers are often
killed by the enemy, my dear.

"Oh, then I guess I'll be an enemy."

Teacher—Johnny, what useful article do we get from the whale?
Johnny—Whalebone.

"Right. Now, Tommy, what do we get from the seal?"
"Sealing wax."

"Be all things to all men," read the Sunday-school teacher. "Now, Johnny,
can you tell me what that means?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered Johnny.
"It means a fellow must be any old thing to anybody."

Teacher—Nellie, I'm afraid you didn't study your lesson. What will you do without an education when you grow up?

Nellie (aged six)—Oh, I'll be a teacher and make other little girls study.

"Now, Minnie," said the Sunday-school teacher, "can you tell me what happened to Lot's wife?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered Minnie.
"She was always fussin' with the neighbors, and one day when she got too fresh God came down and put her
in a sack of salt."

"Potatoes the Finest I Ever Saw."

Owing to the great amount of interest that is being taken in Western Canada, it is well to be informed of some of the facts that are bringing about the great emigration from portions of the United States.

The Canadian Government have authorized agents at different points, and the facts related in the following may be corroborated on application. At the same time they will be able to quote
you rates, and give you certificates
entitling you to low rates on the different lines of railway. The following letter copied from the North Bend (Neb.) Eagle, is an unsolicited testimonial, and the experience of Mr.
Austen is that of hundreds of other Americans, who have made Canada
their home during the past seven or eight years:

"I presume some may be interested to know how we have progressed this year in the Canadian North-West. We have no complaint to offer. We have had a good year, crops were good and we have had a delightful season. I threshed from my place 8,650 bushels of grain. My oats made 65 bushels per acre and weighed 42½ pounds per bushel. My wheat made 31½ bushels per acre and is No. 1 quality. My barley made about 30 bushels of good quality. My crop is a fair average of the crops in the Edmonton district.

"All crops were good here this season. Potatoes the finest I ever saw,
and all vegetables adapted to the climate. We have had a very fine fall
but no exception to the rule as the fall season is, I think, the most pleasant
of the year. We have had no snow yet
(Nov. 9), and have been plowing and working the land preparing for an early seeding next spring. Last night the mercury dropped lower than any previous night this fall and this morning there is a crust of frost on the fields sufficient to prevent field work.

No doubt many would imagine that Alberta had put on her winter overcoat
before this and that the people were wrapped in furs, but it is only a question of time when this country will not be looked upon as an iceberg, but a country fit for the best of mankind to live in.

"We are now assured of a transcontinental railway, which is to be built to the Pacific during the next five years. The Canadian Northern road is graded to within seventy-five miles of Edmonton. It comes from Winnipeg, and will reach us next summer, so with one railroad already at hand, the second to reach us in less than a year,
and the third to penetrate our city and
open up this country to the west across the Rockies to the coast within five years, we surely have reason to believe that the country is progressing.

"Very respectfully,
"L. J. Austen."

The Japanese Amidst Their Native Surroundings

People of Unusual Gentleness of Manner and Habit
—Life of the Mikado's Subjects—

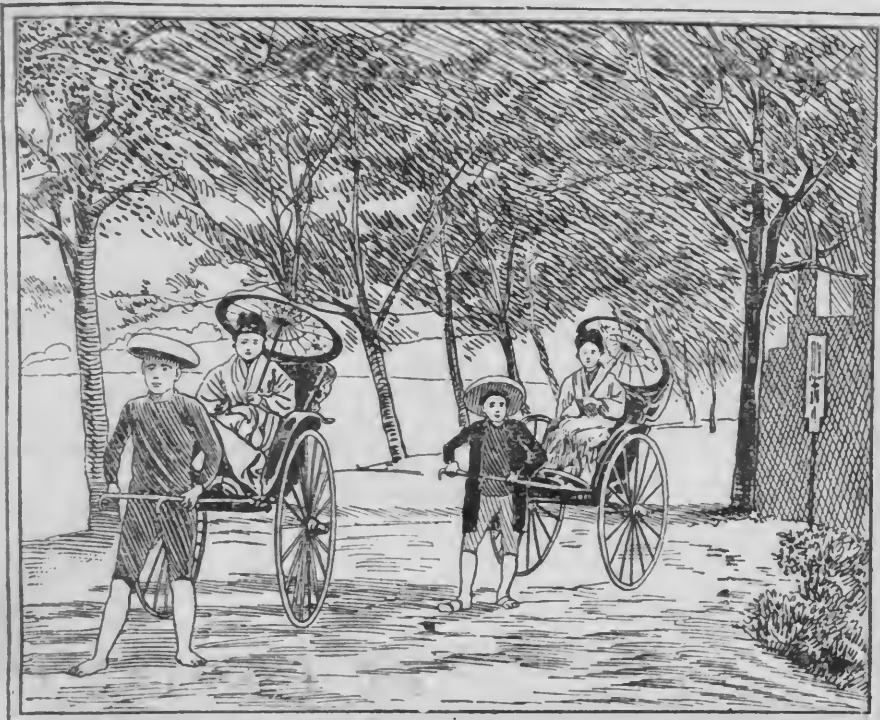

WE HEAR repeatedly the phrase little Japan, but the country has a larger area than that possessed by the British Isles, and a greater population. The city of Tokio itself covers a hundred square miles. The people, however, are small—in stature; a little people of great interest.

Japanese folk of high or low degree, Japanese life whether town or rural, Japanese customs, traits, characteristics, all possess a unique degree for the Anglo-Saxon, whether he be a student or but a superficial observer. They are gentle appearing, these valiant battlers; one associates them with peace and leisure, pretty arts and crafts, poetry and love of the beautiful in all forms. And justly are they thus associated, for the sojourner in Japan seldom experiences sight of violence of any sort. Children are dealt with softly, no blows, no scolding; business and society move on smoothly, undisturbed by brawling. One that has spent many years in the land writes thus of the Jap at home: "If one can imagine a being that is in everything the opposite of a rowdy, such might be a Japanese, for by far the most common characteristic of both men and women is their extreme gentleness, and no nation has so completely mastered the 'soft answer that turneth away wrath' than that of Japan has. A sensitive man walking time to go to bed, the Jap throws down in a corner of the room (the living room, probably) a couple of quilts and his hard little roll of a pillow, and lo! the transition from sitting room to sleeping apartment has been made with small cost of effort to anybody. Is it cool, a little charcoal brazier is brought into use, and one gets warm without having to carry heavy coals about or empty dusty ashes. Is one hungry which the real Jap never appears to be), a little rice, a little tea, and steam is got up for remarkable exertions.

We have all heard of the rickshaw men, that travel long leagues on an occasional cup of tea; and there are many well authenticated cases of runners going over 50 miles a day, pushing a laden cart up and down steep inclines, their only food and drink rice and tea. As to Japanese food in general, travelers are rarely enthusiastic, and it would seem to need a sturdy constitution to keep up on it. Ruddiman Johnston, writing in the Pall Mall, says the food provides for the European distention without satisfaction, but bears witness that the Japs seem well nourished thereby. The writer goes on to say that the Japanese can also live quite well on Korean or Chinese food, and for that reason can travel in these countries at a minimum of trouble and expense.

The food of the middle class Jap at home is about as follows: Breakfast

through the streets of one of our great cities is almost certain to see or hear something that leaves an unpleasant impression; and should he visit the slums his thought must be what an inferno our modern civilization has created. In Japan there is no trace of this. There is no drunkenness and no quarreling, and should a dispute arise it would be conducted in a dignified way, for the Japanese, when excited, do not raise their voices, and the nation possesses no oaths. These remarks are not meant to apply only to the better residential quarters, but also to the meanest parts of the great cities.

Add to the universal peacefulness the universal cleanliness, the beauty of the scenery, the picturesqueness of the people and their costumes, and one would seem to find in the empire of the mikado an earthly paradise whence no one would ever care to journey forth. But, of course, this being a part of the terrestrial sphere, there is not absolute perfection; there abounds fickleness, immorality, a peacock pride, not to be counted admirable by the most devoted worshippers. However, in this article we shall have space for but a fleeting glimpse of life as it appears; will not presume to give an exhaustive study of the much discussed islanders, a close analysis of their principles. We, too, shall praise.

St. Francis Xavier wrote of the Japanese back in the sixteenth century: "This nation is the delight of my soul," and since that time innumerable visitors to the east have spoken superlative words of praise of them. For the charm of the Japanese is strong on one one associated with them, especially one from prosaic America or England; it is very difficult to restrain admiration within bounds in face of so much excellence.

The Jap unconsciously lives the simple life, without any complex striving after it he daily and hourly goes his unnumbered way. As to the matter of clothes, he has reduced them to the lowest terms, without any apparent crusade for "rational dress"; his furniture is delightfully simple, and on this subject we would wax eloquent. It certainly is the most delightful, care-free land in the world for the housekeeper. Very little dirt is brought into the house, very little dusting need be done. Everyone leaves his sandals outside as a matter of course, and enters the carpetless, mat-spread rooms barefooted or in stocking-feet. The usual furniture, besides the ever-present mats, is a wall picture or two, in front of which may be a vase of flowers or a perfect bit of bronze. Not the thousand and one fold-overs that make our own apartment crowded and untidy.

The sleeping arrangements are likewise delightfully simple. When it is consists of rice and some kind of flavoring, fresh or pickled vegetables, salted fish and eggs, and green tea, taken without sugar. At the second meal, the principal one of the day, there may be fresh fish, a little beef or chicken cut up and cooked with vegetables in a stew, and the inevitable rice. Between nine and ten o'clock comes a meal the main part of which is more rice. Fruit is eaten between meals.

We know the Jap takes his daily bath, and it is said that some that belong to the servant class bathe three times a day. We are wont to think of a warm bath as a rather risky thing, making one susceptible to cold; but the Jap gets around that by taking his so hot there is no reaction afterward. And he is the least susceptible of mortals to draughts and breezes. He comes from his steaming bath with his one garment open at the chest, and sits in his well-ventilated house, or unconcerned rides in a railway train beside an open window. He is afraid of neither water nor air.

His house is open to the four winds of heaven by day, and by night airy shutters afford slight protection to those within. Protection from the elements, or from marauders; but burglars are few and far between in Japan. No one molests by day and only very desperate ones by night.

The nude condition of the Jap in public has affronted many foreigners, and has been misrepresented. It is no sign of immodesty among these people, and until their attention was called to it by the shocked European they gave the matter no heed. At the public baths it was expected one would remove one's clothing, and until recently the sexes bathed at a common place with no thought of indecency. Now this is forbidden, but is still the custom on private property in country districts.

Speaking of the question of decency, reminds that the Japs are regarded in a very different light by different travelers, and, in pursuance of our promise not to attempt speaking authoritatively of this phase of the Jap character, we will merely mention that undoubtedly Japanese marriage is open to criticism. Divorce is very easily obtained by the husband, marriage depends wholly on the selection by the young man; the woman is a passive agent, trained to utmost docility.

The Jap women are as demure, sedate and dignified in their manner as it is possible to be, seem as far removed as pole from pole from our idea of women who lack in virtue. And we uphold that as they seem so they are, to a large extent, very lovable members of the world of woman-kind.

KATE WARING.

HAD A SURE ENGAGEMENT.

Ned's Friend Was Going to Furnish Material for a Funeral Without Doubt.

Mrs. Cummings was busy at her desk when Ned, an "old-time" dorky who had been a servant in her family since "before de wah" days, approached her, and with many apologies for the interruption, asked: "Miss Sally, can I git off two weeks from to-day? I has to go to town, ma'am."

"Two weeks from to-day. Why, I think so, Ned. What are you going to do in town?" inquired Mrs. Cummings kindly.

"I wants to go to a fun'al, Miss Sally, a frien' of mine's gwine to be buried den," said Ned.

"You do not mean two weeks, then, Ned," returned Mrs. Cummings.

"Yase, m. Miss Sally, it's two weeks from to-day; ha'n't dat de twenty-fust?"

"Yes, two weeks from to-day will be the 21st, but you must be mistaken, they could not keep the body so long except in a vault."

Mrs. Cummings was now thoroughly puzzled by the old dorky's request, and wondered what it could all mean, relates a writer in Lippincott's. She knew none of Ned's "set" could afford to pay for a vault, and how could they be making arrangements for a funeral two weeks hence, with the prospective corpse still alive? The thought made her shudder.

"Well, m. dat de day," said Ned. "But how can you be so sure? Suppose your friend is not dead by that time?"

"Oh, yase, m. he sholy will be by de twenty-fust; dat's de day he's gwine to be buried 'less he git out befo'."

"Ned, what do you mean? When did he die?" asked Mrs. Cummings.

"Oh, he ain't daid yet, Miss Sally, but he sholy will die, 'case he's gwine to be hung dat day, and dey'll be a fun'al all right."

HEALTH AND BEAUTY HINTS

Odd Bits of Information Pertaining to Skin and Other Imperfections.

A shampoo every fortnight, a good hair tonic used occasionally and a thorough combing night and morning insures a good suit of hair.

The only way to eradicate wrinkles is by feeding the skin, which means a skin food and daily massage across the line of conformation.

A yellow, jaundiced complexion yields to the olive oil treatment, a tablespoonful of olive oil being taken every morning before breakfast.

When the skin is dry and powder scalds upon it, apply a little glycerin and rose water before powdering, rubbing the lotion thoroughly into the skin; powder before the skin is dry.

An eye wash well recommended is composed of distilled water one ounce, camphor water one-half ounce, and boric acid five grains. This is said to be especially good for inflamed lids.

Cases of extreme nervousness and general ill health have resulted from the wearing of too tight shoes. The shoe should be comfortably fitted and conform to the shape of the foot.

Hot water used constantly as the wash for the face takes away too much of the natural oil and leaves the skin hard and drawn in appearance. Tepid water never injures the skin and is best for the bath.

An old recommended cure is turpentine; dip a piece of absorbent cotton in turpentine and bind on the corn. The application should not be made when the shoe is worn, as a blister from the turpentine will result.

GLAD IT WAS NOT SPELLING

So Long as It Was Only His Orthography That Was Imperfect He Was Glad.

"Well, sir, what do you want?" gruffly inquired the editor of a self-conscious young man who entered his sanctum, relates London Tit-Bits.

"I called about this manuscript of mine which you returned," replied the visitor, producing a creased roll and laying it before the editor.

"Well, I returned it. Isn't that enough? Doesn't that show you that I considered it unsuitable?" demanded the editor.

"I wished to know why it was unsuitable, sir," said the author, humbly. "You gave no reason, you know, sir." "Your orthography is imperfect. That was the reason, which became so glaringly apparent in the first page that there was no need to read further. Perfect your orthography, young man, before you try to write stories," said the editor.

"I am much obliged to you, sir, for your very kind and frank criticism, and I shall take your advice," said the author, as he prepared to take his leave. "I am glad it was not my spelling and grammar which are faulty, as a friend of mine hinted. Good-day, sir."

When he reached home he got down his dictionary and hunted up "orthography," and discovered that it meant "the art of spelling and writing words with grammatical correctness!"

CAUSE AND CURE OF RHEUMATISM.

Shown by Numerous Cures Made by Dodd's Kidney Pills—They Cure the Kidneys and the Rheumatism Cures Itself—Remarkable Case of Maggie E. Decker.

Eagle River, Wis., Jan. 16th.—(Special) That rheumatism is caused by disordered kidneys is proved by the cures Dodd's Kidney Pills are making in every state in the Union. They cure the kidneys and the rheumatism cures itself. A cure that has caused deep interest in this neighborhood is that of Maggie E. Decker.

In speaking of it she says: "I had kidney trouble and rheumatism, and was so lame I could not walk. I could not sleep, for I ached all over. I was in a terrible state and firmly believe that if I had not used Dodd's Kidney Pills I would be dead. I took nine boxes of them and they have done me more good than all the other medicines I ever took. Now my aches are all gone, I can eat and sleep and I am feeling good, I want all the world to know that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture gives to Salzer's Oats its highest endorsement. Salzer's New National Oats yielded in 1904 from 150 to 300 bu. per acre in 30 different States, and you, Mr. Farmer, can beat this in 1905, if you will.

Speltz or Emmer, above illustrated, gives 80 bushels grain and four tons hay besides per acre. It's wonderful. Salzer's seeds are pedigree seeds, bred up through careful selection to big yields.

Per Acre.
Salzer's Beardless Barley yielded 121 bu.
Salzer's Home Builder Corn... 80 bu.
Speltz and Macaroni Wheat... 80 bu.
Salzer's Victoria Rape... 60,000 lbs.
Salzer's Teosinte Fodder... 160,000 lbs.
Salzer's Bon Dollar Grass... 50,000 lbs.
Salzer's Pedigree Potatoes... 1,000 bu.
Now such yields pay and you can have them, Mr. Farmer, in 1905.

It's No Use.

Kentucky Republicans now in Washington believe that John W. Yerkes is already shaping his affairs with a view of becoming a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor in Kentucky in 1907. Some of them say that his decision to have nothing to do with the distribution of the post-office patronage in this State is due to the fact that it would embarrass his prospects to mix up in it.

The Diamond Cure.

The latest news from Paris, is, that they have discovered a diamond cure for consumption. If you fear consumption or pneumonia, it will, however, be best for you to take the great remedy mentioned by W. T. McGee, of Vanleer, Tenn. "I had a cough for fourteen years. Nothing helped me until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which gave instant relief, and effected a permanent cure." Unequalled quick cure for Throat and Lung Troubles. At Oberdorfer's drug store; price 50c and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at Oberdorfer's drug store; price 50c.
